Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for coating a substrate with a coating solution, a method for producing a coated substrate, and a coated substrate. 2. Description of the Related Art In the production of a substrate such as a semiconductor wafer, a glass substrate for an LCD, an optical lens, and an electronic device, various semiconductor elements, wiring, and electrodes are formed on a substrate. In recent years, in order to prevent contaminations or the like by dusts, a protective film is formed by applying a protective film such as a resist or the like on the surface of the substrate. A liquid material used for forming the protective film has been spin coated, spray coated, or the like. Also, a light-curable curable composition has been used in order to simplify the process. In the case where the protective film is formed by spin coating, spray coating, or the like, a method is employed in which a substrate having a film formed thereon is rotated at a low speed, and a coating solution is supplied onto the substrate and then the rotation is stopped, so that the coating solution can be spread in an even thickness on the surface of the substrate. This spread coating method has been used for the substrate having a flat surface. However, in order to increase the throughput of a coated substrate, a great amount of coating solution is required, and it becomes necessary to supply the coating solution at a high speed to the surface of the substrate in the case where a substrate having a large area has been spin coated. In such a case, in the spread coating method, a coating solution may be spread thickly. As a method for overcoming this, proposed is a method in which a coating solution is supplied on the substrate having an application surface of a circular shape (except for a concave portion with a circular shape which is formed on a substrate), so that a coating solution is spread and a coating film is formed in an even thickness on the application surface having the circular shape (see Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2001-254882). However, when a coating solution is spread in an even thickness on the application surface having the circular shape, it is difficult to completely remove bubbles in the coating solution. In this
