I have made a document with a catcode-less approach. I use  $\{...\}$  for inline math. Is this correct? A: Yes, this is perfectly fine. However, I would not use catcode-less for inline text. For example, it would not be possible to put a brace character inside a math environment, because the next  $in the math scope acts as a command and tries to interpret the input as a math string.$

A: I think you don't know how to change/remove your custom title. I have no experience with photoshop but this is how it's done in MS Word. In the "Insert" menu, choose "Annotation". Type your comment. Click OK and insert your picture. Go to the "Insert" menu again, choose "Format", then "Comment". Type your comment. Click OK and you're done. This tutorial will cover creating a module that extends the public method public void saveAll(Collection entities), which is used to persist all the entity instances contained in a Collection. The public method is a standard JPA call. Create a command handler module in src/main/java/com/example/commands and add the following. The method createAll(Collection entities) is called from a simple Spring MVC controller when all models are saved. We create the collection in this method and pass it to the newPersistAll(Collection) method. The newPersistAll() method in turn passes the collection to EntityManager.persist() but we don't allow persistence by default. This is because the newPersistAll() method also supports undo / redo. The newPersistAll(Collection) method uses EntityManager.merge() to persist all the entities in the collection. We don't want this to happen until all objects in the collection have been persisted. So we override the standard merge() behavior using the mergeAll() method and return the resulting value. If we don't return the resulting value then the save will fail. We return true because we want this to take place right after newPersistAll(Collection) is called. ba244e880a
