Automotive design In the field of automotive design, with the aid of CAD (computer-aided design), AutoCAD is a widely used software program, also known as AutoCAD 3D. AutoCAD is created and distributed by Autodesk. Inventor is another software for automotive design which is distributed by Autodesk and together these two programs are used for 2D and 3D design of automobiles. 3D Studio MAX (3D Modeling) and Maya are other Autodesk-developed software programs for 3D design. 3D Studio Max, being one of the most powerful general 3D CAD software packages, is especially suited for creating simulations and animations. X-Creations, Keyshot, Sculptiris, XSI, TurboSquid, VueScape are some of the other auto CAD software packages. Popular culture CAD has been featured in numerous films and television shows. In the 2005 film, The Legend of Zorro, the hero uses a sword and a CAD app to set up a frame of an ornate doorway. In The Simpsons episode "The Cartridge Family", Bart opens the door to the drive-in theatre with a CAD program. In May 2011, during the Academy Awards, the VFX team behind The Golden Compass used a general-purpose CAD program to create elaborate 3D renderings of the rooftops of the Lobster Quadrant and the Moon Hopper. In the story of the film Stealth, the main character, played by Tom Cruise, uses the CAD software Lattice to plan the infiltration of the headquarters of the enemy.
