Anaplastic ependymoma (AE) is a rare subtype of ependymoma with an aggressive clinical behavior. Alveolar differentiation of AE in the literature is very rare. Herein, we present two novel cases of AE with alveolar differentiation. Both cases showed alveolar differentiation with monotonous cuboidal or polygonal cells admixed with foci of neoplastic ependymal cells. Immunohistochemically, both cases demonstrated strong and diffuse expression of the epithelial markers cytokeratin and EMA, whereas epithelial membrane antigen was partially expressed in one case. The patients were alive and well at 6 and 13 months, respectively, after diagnosis. Alveolar differentiation was found in two cases of AE in the literature. Alveolar differentiation in AE is a rare event; to our knowledge, this is the first description of AE showing alveolar differentiation. The small number of cases and the possible implication of this finding in the behavior of AE in the literature requires further investigation.General, regional and localized skin manifestations in patients with inflammatory bowel disease. Inflammatory bowel disease (IBD) is a chronic, relapsing, inflammatory disorder of the gastrointestinal tract. Skin manifestations in patients with IBD are variable and range from diffuse (pruritus, rash, or erythema nodosum) to local (ulcerative colitis, pyoderma gangrenosum, hidradenitis suppurativa) to regional (erythema nodosum). Although skin involvement in IBD
