API RP 545 Recommendations for Lightning Protection for Above Ground Storage Tanks for Flammable or Combustible Liquids. Lightning protection strategies have been developed for tanks that are designed for inland use. However, with the increasing number of offshore applications, an aboveground tank must have appropriate protection to protect the critical process equipment against severe damage that may result from lightning strikes. In this document, the general principles for securing aboveground tanks for the protection of associated critical process equipment are addressed. It also summarizes available recommendations of the American Petroleum Institute (API) Stormwater Engineering Division, Lightning Protection for Aboveground Storage Tanks (API RP 545). The recommendations represent a comprehensive approach 54b84cb42d
