For the first time in four years, the country has seen a decline in its suicide rate, and the number of people who have contemplated killing themselves has dropped. Last year, 37 people took their own lives in this country, a decrease of over 20% since the height of the recession in 2008. There have been recessions before. So far, we've always recovered. It's what people do. But this time, there are some worrying signs that this might not happen. No economic recovery has ever been guaranteed, and Britain has enjoyed a particularly bad one. In the last four years, over 50,000 have lost their jobs, and a lot of people in their 40s and 50s are now in their 30s. Only in France and Italy has this rate of unemployment been higher. You can't fix the economy until you fix the people who are feeling a little down. The number of young people who are contemplating suicide, and are at risk of doing it, has risen sharply. And people who are feeling depressed and worried about money or having a miserable job, often spend it on things that they know make them feel bad. This has to stop. And it's not just people's feelings that we have to worry about. An estimated 2.5 million households are going to be in arrears on their mortgages this year. On top of this, the cost of living in the UK is soaring. Fuel bills are up. Rent is rising. And the price of food is going up. Let's be honest, not a lot of us are going to be rushing out and buying shares now, though. The value of the share market is barely up a tenth of the growth of inflation. People are much more worried about the rising cost of food and energy than the rising price of shares. And to be fair, it's not as if shares are going to get you a lot of money. If you own shares, the returns on your investment are

A: Try using `setInterval()` with the value of one hour.
`setInterval(function() { $("#welcome").load("scripts/php/load-notifications.php"); }, 3600000);`
Even if you have yet to meet Ariana Grande, it's quite easy to tell where her fan base comes from. The former Nickelodeon star-turned-pop-rock-sensation is gearing up for the release of her debut album, "My Everything" (expected to drop tomorrow). Loud, ready and dedicated — that seems to be the fitting description of Grande's fans, the vast majority of whom are teen girls. These girls can't wait to hear "One Last Time" and "Love Me Harder." And that tells you all you need to know about the fan base behind Ariana Grande. These are her most dedicated fans. The majority of Ariana Grande's adult fans — the ones who don't sport a "Baby I" sweatshirt — appear to be from other entertainment sources, like the cutesy Nickelodeon show that made Ariana famous or her breakout role as the character of Georgina Sparks on the Nickelodeon comedy, "Victorious." Fans who follow Ariana Grande for her talent can be found in every corner of the Internet, including Twitter, Instagram and YouTube. If you've been following Ariana for a long time, you've probably noticed her fan base consist of more tweens and teens than of a more adult crowd. Ariana's every move is like a competition for the younger demographic. Fans following her on Twitter, as well as on her YouTube channel, are quick to re-tweet her moments and are also quick to bash anything that they perceive as unfriendly to her popularity. Ariana Grande is the new Bieber. The majority of Ariana
