We need to use a subscription API to retrieve the tenant group information of Azure AD users. The REST call should return the list of tenant groups for the given Azure AD user. Is there any REST API we can use for this requirement? Thanks. A: No. You can achieve this by using PowerShell and Azure Powershell function that returns the user's default groups. Here is an example: $uri = New-Object Uri $user = New-Object Microsoft.Open.AzureAD.Model.User $user.Identity.UserPrincipalName = "DOMAIN\user@user.com" $user.PrincipalType = "ServicePrincipal" $context = New-AzureADDirectoryRoleAssignmentsContext $context.Tenant = "00000000-0000-0000-0000-000000000000" $context.Principal = $user $groups = $context.GetDefaultGroups() It is the same PowerShell example as in the documentation

2:09 Laser and Fiber Cutter! for 2 years old! Laser and Fiber Cutter! for 2 years old! Laser and Fiber Cutter! for 2 years old! I will show you to purchase this laser cutter on Amazon.com by using this link: The very common questions: Who will ever use this laser? Star could be more expensive (sorry guys) than your basic laser. We purchased a basic laser without anti-vibration technology, thinking we wanted dust extraction. Usually we purchase 60% new lasers and 40% used. When we saw Star, it carries the same laser technology, but there is a much better dust extraction system. That was a selling point for me. If you want to increase the power to a laser system, you can buy a laser enclosure to do so. That was not an option for me, but again it comes down to dust extraction. If you are new to lasers, there is a chance if you don't use them on a daily basis, they won't get dirty. You can go into the Amazon store and grab a laser any time you want without dust extraction, however, you won't be able to use the laser for all work. (That's where this comes into play) Another consideration is high-powered lasers need a lot of power, reducing the cost to about $800 dollars, easy. But, when I wanted to do cutting/embroidery, I wanted something powerful and cheap. Again, we found the best price on the laser was a new one, when we put in some of our work with it, the customer service helped and he took it back even though it was fully used. (No risk of refunds of course) Another thing to consider. You can connect multiple Star lasers together. We use it to cut 2x4's and then cut 3"x3's at the same time.
