Adobe Photoshop is the most powerful image-editing tool in the world. It has a sophisticated approach to image manipulation, encouraging you to achieve specific results through a direct approach. If you like layers, you will love Photoshop. All of your images and videos will be automatically loaded into Photoshop after scanning for you, or manually via the Import from Scanner option. If Photoshop is already installed on your computer, it is easily accessible from the desktop by pressing Ctrl + Shift + P. If not, it is easy to download it from Adobe.com and install it on any computer. If you have a camera and a memory card, you can also install Photoshop to capture photos or videos directly from your camera. Adobe Photoshop is a powerful image editor with most basic features that support all major camera models, as well as DSLRs, webcams, and camcorders. All of your images and videos will be automatically loaded into Photoshop after scanning for you, or manually via the Import from Scanner option. Adobe Photoshop is a powerful image editor with most basic features that support all major camera models, as well as DSLRs, webcams, and camcorders. All of your images and videos will be automatically loaded into Photoshop after scanning for you, or manually via the Import from Scanner option. The following are some of the most commonly used Photoshop tools: Effects Photoshop's effects allow you to apply photo filters and create special effects that you can use to enhance your creations. Blur Blur is used to soften and reduce the apparent sharpness of an image. Grain Grain increases the granularity of an image, making fine details more visible and giving it a vintage, film-like appearance. Tonal Tonal uses a preset color blend from one image to another. Smudge Smudge enables you to create motion blur or to apply a soft brushstroke over an image. Filter You can apply filters in creative new ways, to create new and interesting effects. Filters offer a fast and easy way to adjust the exposure, contrast, brightness, color balance, or saturation of your image. Image Transformation This tool lets you transform your images, including cropping them, rotating them, flipping them horizontally, and straightening them. Transform functions also let you scale and change the direction of an image. Layer

A contentious life: PBS Films slams biased reporting on the Australian bushfire crisis With a long and contentious history, the PBS documentary films titled Age of Apocalypse: Australian Bushfire Crisis are in the news this week as the state of Queensland enters an unprecedented period of disaster. The director of the films, Mark O'Rourke, made a now famous tape recording in which he told the then minister for the environment, Peter Garrett, "we're not trying to make you look stupid". In the film, Mr O'Rourke is on the receiving end of a heated phone conversation with Mr Garrett in which he tells him the government has systematically ignored scientific advice and paid inadequate attention to the severity of the fires. While the documentary is an excellent account of the history of Australian bushfires, the interviews with Mr O'Rourke and documentary makers Emma Clifton, Amelia Algar, Michael Leunig and Robert Dessaix present a picture of a minister out of his depth (or rather out of his pocket) as he desperately tries to avoid looking bad in the media and to divert attention away from the fact that he has done little or nothing to prevent the disasters that have befallen the people of Queensland in recent months. The Ages of Apocalypse is based on two series of films that the BBC produced in 2004 and 2006, which were broadcast in Britain the following year. In its new film, the corporation has been able to add to the narrative that first aired, and this has resulted in several "exposés" of how the government is treating the residents of Queensland. Before the world now knows it, the beleaguered minister stands accused of trying to avoid the blame for the disaster and of using the ABC's Geoffrey Rush as a scapegoat. The minister is reported to have said to Mr Rush: "If you were to ask me what's been the cause of this, I would answer you. That's what journalists do for a living. The problem is, I can't remember what I said." The evidence that emerges in the Age of Apocalypse is that the minister is not playing along, and was not honest in his conversation with Mr Garrett. The interviews that the documentary team have conducted with people who have experienced the fires first hand confirm that the minister has done little to prevent the disaster or to assist the afflicted residents. The fact that the newly appointed minister for

Q: Cannot use an Array to retrieve data from a mysql database. I am working on a project that's using php and MySQL. On this project, I have a.php page where you can use a web form to enter a 6 digit code to search for a specific record. This page is working fine when I have the number of codes in the code simply stored in a string. However, I need to get them stored in an array so I can do a for each loop with the codes to search for. Originally I stored the codes into a string as follows `$searchcode = $_POST['searchcode']; $searchcodes = $db->prepare("SELECT * FROM Codes WHERE Code= :searchcode;"); $searchcodes -> execute(array(":searchcode" => $searchcode));` Then I stored the codes in an array as follows `$codes = $result->fetch_assoc(); $searchcodes = array($codes);` However, when I changed the string to an array of the codes as above, it gives me the following error: Warning: mysqli_stmt::fetch_assoc() expects parameter 1 to be mysqli_result, boolean given in Any idea why? A: You need to add a result in your execution query, e.g: `$searchcodes = $db->prepare("SELECT * FROM Codes WHERE Code= :searchcode;"); $searchcodes -> execute(array(":searchcode" => $searchcode)); $codes = $searchcodes->fetch_assoc();` I suspect your error comes from the fact that `$result->fetch_assoc()` returns false if there is no data. Q: Adding an Angular2 project into an existing Java web project I want to add Angular2 project into an existing Java web project. The project is an existing project that I am working on. I want to add Angular2 components into it and build it using Angular2 CLI. But I am stuck at the time of building the application. I got the error The serve-path of Angular2 application is missing. Project structure What I did so far: I created a new Angular2 project and added it into the existing project (without adding into Tomcat). But when I tried to build the application I got the
