If you have the serial key to FIFA 10/11 you are listed on the most active users list of FIFAShield.Q: How to search "logical" entities? I'm building a page that shows data-analysis results for a web-browser. Each of the results are the output of a web service, which is called once. So, no interaction with the server required. I'd like to display the user a list of results, showing their properties. A user might be looking for specific properties of a result, like the full name of a record. Or, he might be looking for all the records that have a particular property. I'm using the Ext.grid.plugin.List (or GridPanel) plugin to create the layout. My rows in the grid just have an element with the value from the result as a string. Or, in the case of count-valued results, I could use either an Ext.NumberCell or Ext.form.LabelElement (or something like that). So, how do I build a search box for finding records by a certain property? How do I match the input to a correct row in the grid, so that my row's data gets populated properly? EDIT: On second thought, perhaps I should just use HTML tables for this. The user would then be able to click on a row in the grid and see more detailed properties about that record. A: The most simple solution is to use the query builder. It allows you to build exactly the query you described. (You can also modify the type if you have to. After you build the query you can apply it to your store like this: var store
