Jon Jones has found out that being a UFC champion is a pretty nice job, as he awaits his rematch with Daniel Cormier at UFC 197. Following his dramatic, five-round decision win over Anthony Smith last weekend, Jones admitted he was "on cloud nine" over his championship title win over Cormier, but has now seen the cheque for the fight fall a little short of what he expected. Jones told TMZ Sports that he expected his win bonus to be "around 15 grand". That said, for now, he's not complaining about the way things have worked out. "I just won a world title, and I'm on cloud nine, I'm good" Jones said. "That's a cool way to start the year. "The bonus, you know, it wasn't as much as I was hoping for, but it is what it is. "I'll see if I can get it in the future. "I'm going to try to get as much out of every opportunity I have." Following his victory in New York, Jones made it clear that he wasn't going to allow the media to start calling him a "superstar", as he felt that had been done for a bit too long. "I guess it is what it is," he said, "but I hope that people start to call me a superstar. I think I'm all of that. I was never born to be some superstar".

Jones is well used to having to make do with less than the majority of his paydays. "I've always been doing stuff like this – for my whole life I've been doing stuff like this," he said. "I've been fighting for a lot less than what I've been making. "I'm not about the money, I'm about the competition," he said. "So whatever I have to do to get ready for this rematch, I'll be ready." In the meantime, if he wins next month, Jones is hoping that he can take some of Cormier's title with him. "He's not [the
