We can do this by just calculating the zeros of the function but I was asked what would happen if $y=2$. I have two questions here. What does that result in when graphing? I know that if the roots of a function are real then plotting them with a different colormap tells us something about the nature of the function. But for this one I got a picture like this: A: Using an explicit form of the equation and simplifying, you should find the zeros of the function to be: $x_{1,2} = \pm\sqrt{2}$ $x^2 + y^2 - 4 = 0$ So plotting the zeros of the Company of Heroes - Tale of Valor, The is a PC strategy game developed by Relic Entertainment and published by THQ for Microsoft Windows, Xbox 360 and PlayStation 3 in May 2009. Set during the winter of 1944, at the time of the Allied invasion of the Italian mainland, the game features single player campaign, open battlefield modes, and multiplayer via Internet or local network. The game features four separate, single-player campaigns set in Ortona, Cassino, San Pietro Infine and Monte Cassino. The campaign maps are all based on real-life locations, the designers state, representing the Italian mainland, Sicily and the Italian Alps. The game also features the "Battle of the Bulge", a mission type, which recreates the fighting that took place in the Ardennes forest from the Allied perspective. The developer released free updates and additional campaigns since the initial release. In 2011, the game was re-released in digital download form by GOG.Com.

Although this is a small project, it represents a breakthrough in program development. Mainly for DOS, but also for the Win16 port of the same project, it is one of the best pure DOS games we have. It has a great soundtrack, music that is heard as the game progresses and a lot of the original soundtrack was made available as a mod to this game (it seems Uniqu3d have this patch).
